ALWAYS on time--- C. M. P. Dividends

January 1. Time for another C. M. P. Dividend Check. The 105th uninterrupted dividend, representing over $325,000.00 was distributed to stockholders located in practically every city and town throughout Maine.

People who have invested their savings in the Preferred Stock of Central Maine Power Company receive their dividends with clocklike regularity. These people invested for safety, for surety of dividends—a "nest egg" for times just like these.

Cash dividends ALWAYS ON TIME and always from earnings is the impregnable record of Central Maine Power Company ever since preferred dividends were started over 26 years ago.

CENTRAL MAINE POWER COMPANY

Heard and Seen at Advertiser Office

The sanding crew were busy Saturday morning and did a good job at putting the where-with-all on the sidewalks, which kept folks right side up.

Geo. F. Hill says: "Give us a word about our new Pontiacs that are here. We have the ultra-modern car and want the world to know the latest creation is going to catch on solid."

George and Virginia Butler of Maple street made us a call, Tuesday noon, bringing with them a purse and a handkerchief they found on Whitman street near the Cummings stable.

An a. l. appears in another column of this issue for the Mechanic Falls Monumental Works offering a ten percent discount on all new designs of monuments and headstones. See ad.

Frederick Marshall Davis of Lewiston, formerly of Norway has sent in two very interesting stories he has written and will soon appear in the Advertiser. They are entitled "The Convict Ship" and "Memories of Greenwood."

A dog was run over opposite Withered Park about 5 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon. The dog was a his and run kind and reported to have whizzed along apparently unharmed. It is understood his number was taken. The dog disappeared in the darkness while letting out a series of sharp yelps.

Recently items have been read with interest in regard to the long life of the long life of the every day "dish pan". In the home of Mrs. W. Twitcheil's father, H. J. Lewellyn, Portland, is the same dish pan, a heavy tin that has been used daily for over fifty years. Not a dent or a leak up to date.

The roads last Friday afternoon were a mass of ice and places almost impassible, but the rise in temperature, Saturday morning it off and the cold weather again Saturday night put the roads in fine condition again. New Year's day they were free from ice and snow and were in as perfect a condition as any time in the summer.

A bright light in the direction of Mt. Washington was observed at 9 o'clock, Sunday evening. It flashed for five minutes with the intensity of a most brilliant star and at times, perhaps, because of the atmosphere, four lights were counted. This display might have been the New Year's greeting sent out by weather observers wintering on the summit. A 400 watt electric light and flares were planned for Saturday night, but clouds prevented the display.

Claire W. Hathaway, in renewing her subscription to the Advertiser, had the following to say:

The Oxford County folks in Boston that I knew were disgusted with the man of New Hampshire who called Roosevelt a Real American and sorry to see it on first page of an Oxford County paper. It being born rich and belonging to a party whose slogan is "we want beer" and their song is "The Sidewalks of New York" makes a Real American, we have plenty of that kind and I prefer a man like Hoover, who has something about the problems of all classes. The U. S. certainly disgraced us all in the year of 1932."

OXFORD-FORE STREET

Elmer Morrill of Norway and Mr. Abbott are cutting wood in this vicinity.

E. E. Twitcheil and Herman Thurlow are getting Mr. Twitcheil's yearly supply of wool. Oscar Twitcheil and Stanley Wills are making the welkin ring to the tune of their axes as they fell the forest for A. D. Cummings and others.

Good winter weather with thermometers registering "seven" below zero morning now and then. The cement and black road clear of ice since Saturday morning, though not as much traffic as before drivers' licenses for 1933 were needed. Many got thrills Saturday as their autos spun round and round on icy way around curves; some spun outside the limits into nearby fields, shining apple trees apparently, before they quieted down. No one injured, known of.

E. E. Twitcheil, Oscar Twitcheil, Al Twitcheil and Herman Thurlow attended A. C. C. Conference held in Sabatius Friday. Saturday, Mrs. Chestina Twitcheil and Flora Cummings attended Conference held in Auburn. Sunday, Mrs. Chestina Brown went to Auburn to conference.

Flora Cummings, who spent the Christmas holidays in West Paris with her sons and families, returned home Friday. Expect she soon will tire of making ashes and start forth again some place, somewhere.

Mr. and Mrs. Judkins Cummings of West Paris visited his aunt, Mrs. Chestina Twitcheil, Friday.

Christmas trees are serving as decorations outside of many a door while the wreaths look somewhat the worse from wind and weather. Do they still remind us of "Peace on Earth and Good Will Toward Men" or that the hustle and bustle of a holiday season is well over?

Mrs. M. Reynolds and Misses Arlino, Doris and Gordon Reynolds were in Norway, Wednesday.

Miss Ruth Twitcheil was sick Sunday with a bad cold, but is better.

James Dunbar of Oxford was at Al Twitcheil's for Christmas.

Thomas Twitcheil spent the past week at Oxford with his grandmother Trebilcock.

Miss Pauline Snow of Norway visited Miss Beulah Bachelder, December 28.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Twitcheil moved to Portland with their son, James, to see the eye doctor, December 27.

Mrs. E. E. Twitcheil visited Mrs. Quint, December 27.

Stanley Bachelder has been sick for the last few days, but is better.

Ray Thurlow of Oxford visited Leon Twitcheil, Monday afternoon, Jan. 2.

The Fore Street School commenced Monday, January 2, with Irene Lotherop as teacher.

William Gorman is stopping with his brother, at present.

NORWAY-HOWE'S HILL

Mrs. Mildred Howe and daughter, Jean, spent the day last Friday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Heath of East Waterford.

Lester Cobb's children are sick with bad colds.

Ernest Wentworth has been working for Fred Pierce the past two weeks.

Arthur Moore spent the night last Friday with his sister, Clara Pierce.

Mrs. Clara Pierce and her mother, Mrs. C. D. Morse from North Norway, went to South Paris last Friday afternoon to see Mrs. Morse's daughter and family, who are all sick with colds. They found them all on the grain.

Mrs. Jennie Howe, Ethel and Mildred Howe and Clara Pierce went to Lewiston, Wednesday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland Ranlett from Auburn were callers last Saturday afternoon at Ethel Howe's.

Likes, Dislikes and Confessions

By the Sage of Alton, N. H.

Much of the matter published in newspapers and magazines is imaginary, conjectural, or so cunningly phrased that the casual or thoughtless reader is misled. Such has been called propaganda. A shorter and uglier word would tell the truth. Lies written or spoken are—just lies, nothing else but.

I am a Republican. It would require a considerable space to fully explain why I am not a Democrat, and then I would state only a personal opinion. Being a Republican, however, has never yet caused me to be other than a loyal American. When the result of the recent election became known, I was really glad that Mr. Roosevelt was the popular choice. I said so and was asked if I thought that Democratic rule would be good for the people of this country, and I replied that, under ordinary conditions, I do not think that Epsom salts are good for the human system but that there are times and conditions when a heroic dose would bring about a desirable change.

It is impossible to please everybody. Long ago I lost my infantile desire to please people. Many persons are not pleased with themselves. A very friendly person became quite incensed when I remarked that certain people were making more and better use of their opportunities, were more friendly in their contacts, more helpful to each other and in many ways superior to "us Yankees." I simply told the fact. That it would please or displease those who listened did not enter my mind. Truth is whole some. Wise people appreciate it.

I believe that people, towns, country or anything else is beyond improvement, just because it is "mine," is not a healthy belief. John Wampanaker, the great merchant of New York and Philadelphia, was constantly making changes and improvements in his stores. It was his belief that when a man or a business became so "good" that it could not be made better, he or it was finished.

The town in which I live, in which I first saw the beauty of day, is a fine place of residence for those who have simple tastes, a love of Nature and income sufficient. But as far as opportunities to earn a living the chances are few and uncertain. There is a reason, of course.

During the Christmas season many cards and letters came to me. One of the most heart-cheering letters came from a New York Jew, a man of charm and culture, who has been a friend for forty years. In this letter are the words, "I still get pleasure from our long and steadfast friendship." He and I have had many discussions; we have never agreed absolutely on all subjects; but he never asked me, as my Yankee friend did, "If you do not like everything and everybody here, why in hell don't you go somewhere else?"

People and places can remain small and unimportant because of the qualities that attract. No education is ever complete. Benjamin Franklin was one of the wisest and most learned of men, but when death was near—if I am rightly informed he asked for information on some subject which he did not fully understand. Modest humility, a constant search for useful information, a real desire to be helpful, a spirit of loyalty that will seek to prevent or correct wrongs and injustice, whenever possible, and "steadfast for friendship" with justice and those one loves, are qualities that show greatness of soul.

A student at Teachers' College in Boston tells of a young Jewess, who is also so student there, whose character she admires and whose friendship she values. This Jewess is the youngest of a family of nine. One of her brothers is a lawyer, another is a dentist, one a medical doctor, another is a school at Mass., chussets Tech and all the others are studying diligently to acquire knowledge which will enable them to advance to positions of importance. I have no information regarding the father of this ambitious family; he may have been "just another Jew peddler," but I am sure he loved his family and instilled in their minds the very urgent need of making the best of their opportunities for advancement.

I was once asked, when being examined for jury duty in a New York City court, "Where were you born, Mr. Mitchell?" When I made reply that I was born in the small town of Alton, New Hampshire, the attorney asked, "Is not a fact; Mr. Mitchell, that you are prejudiced against the Jews?" I replied that I was not and that I could prove it. When asked for the proof, I answered, "I recall that Jesus was a Jew, that Benjamin Disraeli was a Jew, that Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, once Prime Minister of England, and a friend of Queen Victoria, was a Jew, and," I added, "Sol Landsmann is a Jew." The lawyer then said, "I remember about the first two you mention, but who, pray, is Sol Landsmann?" I told him that Sol was a friend of mine who lived down on the East Side, in Broome Street, and that I admitted him. I was accepted as a Jew, and Sol, by the way, is a friend of mine yet; it was from him that the fine letter came, telling of our "long and steadfast friendship."

I love truth and honesty of purpose; ambition and desire for advancement; loyalty to duty, friends, family and country; but I detest a hypocrite and a liar; I utterly abhor the spirit of unfairness, bigotry, and intolerance—and I don't care a whoop who knows it.

—Frank E. Mitchell.

three concrete, or partially concrete bridge, built over that river this year. The bridge on Fore Street, across the river, was the last to be built. The last was awarded to The Lackawanna Steel Construction Corporation, of Buffalo, New York, for $10,104, and the sub-structure and floor to Green & Wilson, of Waterbury, Maine, for $35,353.50, which amounts, added to those enumerated in the first of this article, make the sum expended on Route Twenty-six, this year, most of it in Oxford County, the enormous figure of $298,935.93—more than a quarter million of dollars.

The passing of the Fore Street bridge marks the disappearance of a type of bridge common in the middle of the last century—a covered bridge. From 1837 to 1843, the town of Oxford built three of these bridges over the Little Androscoggin River—the other two—the Smith Bridge and the Oxford Bridge—yet standing. These bridges, with their truss work, did away with a center pier, common in the days before this type of bridge making a bridge over a river, and were covered to prevent decay of the truss-work. They made a refuge for travelers during sudden storms; and formed an illustration and a slogan for abolitionists—as covered bridges—yet remembered. They gave a subject for a once popular poem, by David Barker, a sweet singer of Maine.

After leaving Welchville, the road climbs Pigeon Hill. This is an older portion of the town, so far as settlement is concerned. After reaching the summit, the road finds an open center, where the fathers and mothers of this portion of the town sleep, the old fashioned roses which were planted to perpetuate the sweetness of some sleeper, running not over the grass as it has tribute to the more fact that the roses were once alive and took parts with other lives and were probably as good as environment could make them, and as much entitled to bouquets as other actors.

To the north of this cemetery runs, for a part of the way, at least, two parallel lines of stonewall, which marks the line of an old county road, which has not been used, except for farming purposes, for three-quarters of a century, and yet is a center road as it has never been officially discontinued. The cellar of an old house can be seen a few rods down this road, surrounded by a few lilac bushes to differentiate it from some natural hollow in the ground, and as mule testimony to the fact that it is home of feminine humanity. This is one of two such hollows between this road and the river or the unused part. A forest has grown up over some of this territory and the second cellar hole, in the bottom of which grow trees ten feet in diameter, to show one how fleeting is humanity and how quickly nature obliterates all the works of human kind.

The view from Pigeon Hill is picturesque. The Little Androscoggin Valley lies to the east—the parallel road on the eastern bank is macadamized along with the farms on the flats near the shores and the wooded hills back of them. These hills are built of granite, with ledges cropping out here and there, and in one of them can be seen a small cave where the rock was taken out and ground up to make the paving for this road. It will remain as historic evidence of the building, perhaps, after the road itself has disappeared, the sawdust in the hole in the marble mountain outside of Athens gives mute testimony of where the armless Venuses of Melos and other departed and semi-departed Grecian Statues came from.

To the south can be seen the village of Mechanic Falls, its houses arising from tree-embowered streets. This opening, of late years, become desirable as a place of residence and there are, at least, two places which attract attention—the True residence and the Morey Farm.

The road passes out of Oxford County, but continues in interest until it reaches the sea.

ANDOVER

Edwin W. Abbott

Patrolman Edwin W. Abbott, aged eighty-five years, who had been one of "Boston's Finest" for forty years and notable as one of the biggest and most powerful policemen in the country, died January 2 at his home, 201 North Street in the Dorchester district of Boston. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. Louis S. Stevens and Mrs. Clara R. Miller, who occupy the same house and two sons, Dwight Abbott of Pittsburgh, Penn., and Edward of Dorchester.

Mr. Abbott was retired twenty years ago and with the exception of a short assignment at Station 5, had been attached to Boston Police Headquarters at that time located in Pemberton Sq. He was a kindly man and was known to everyone in Pemberton Square. He was appointed on April 20, 1874, and developed much ability as a detective. His most famous case was the capture and conviction of "Stove Pipe" Bailey, a desperate criminal who had haunted the South End and outwitted the police for several years. He also took part in the capture of Thomas W. Piper, the murderer of Mabel Young.

He was born in Andover. Funeral services were held Tuesday morning with services at Gleason's undertaking chapel, 2 Dorchester St., at 10 o'clock. Dr. David L. Martin, founder of the American Bible Class of the Greenwood Methodist Episcopal church of Dorchester officiated. Interment was in Auburn, Me., beside his wife, who died many years ago.

A PARADOX

It was midnight on the ocean. Not a street car was in sight; The sun was shining brightly; And it rained all day that night. 'Twas a summer night in winter. The rain was snowing fast; A barefoot boy with heavy shoes, Stood sitting on the grass. It was evening and the rising sun Was setting in the west. And the little fishes in the trees Were huddling in their nests. The rain was fast pouring down, The moon was shining bright; And everything that one could see, Was hidden out of sight.

While the organ pealed potatoes, Lord was rendered by the choir. While the sexton sang the hymn, Someone set the church on fire. "Holy smoke!" the preacher shouted, In the ruin his hat hung. Now his head resumed Heaven, For there is no parting there. End-Cologne heard a GINGER Snap When Saint Saur came. All wondered why Turn Over Looked to very young men. Whipped Cream seemed in great distress. She didn't know what to do. For she was watching Pop Chop A Hammy Steak in a stew. A Pickle lay there looking sour, Watching an Oyster shell a Peanut; All laughed to see Raspberry Jam A Sausage through a Doughnut.

Frankfurt saw a lady friend And he came along his Order, He almost Mashed Potato As it laid there in the Spider. Marshmallow came in in white, He had Sugar on his coat. He tried to read an A-la-Carte, While sitting on Table-d'Hotel. A Tomato tried to Ketchup With a Salad on the run. When the party was over, And they'd all had lots of fun. —O. E. STONE.

NORTH BRIDGTON

Holiday Guests—Children Attended Movies—Deer Tangled in Snow Fence.

Mr. and Mrs. Solon Chase (nee Frances Ward) of Turner and Auburn, were guests of last night of Mrs. Perley Howard, a few days during Christmas at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Lathup and family, of Otisfield, and Mr. and Mrs. Rado Allen and children were dinner guests of Mrs. Charles Allen, on Christmas day. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Allen and family spent Christmas Day with their father in Bridgton.

Mrs. Perley Howard has returned home from Sandy Creek where she has been assisting the care of Mrs. Mary Plaisard. Mrs. Plaisard has been moved from her home at Sandy Creek to her sister's, Mrs. Walter Merrill's.

Mrs. Gertrude Adams has returned from Portland, where she has been caring for her daughter, Elva, who met with a painful accident, falling and breaking her ankle. Mrs. Helen Carpenter is with her sister, Elva, at present.

Monday, Dec. 26, twenty-nine kids from this part of Norway were taken to Bridgton to the free movies at the State Theatre, by the kindness of J. G. Chabourne in his big truck. They all came home happy and said they had a wonderful time.

School began Monday, Jan. 2nd, after a two weeks vacation.

Mrs. Perley Howard and children called on her aunts, Mrs. Augusta Bryant and Mrs. Olive Barber, in Bridgton, recently.

A big buck deer was seen near the home of Arthur Movatt, Monday, Jan. 2. He got tangled up in the snow fence, losing one of his horns.

Arthur Movatt butchered a large hog, recently.

Allice and George Crockett were guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Crockett, recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Darling and family of Harpswell were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alpheus Holden over the holidays.

Bridgton Academy

Bridgton Academy opened on Tuesday morning for the winter term and all of the coaches will work their candidates hard during the week as this week end will see all of the sports teams getting into action with the exception of track which will not open the indoor season until next week, when they go to Andover to face Phillips, Andover.

Friday night the varsity and the second team will meet the Portland Boys' Club at the Bungalow Playhouse in Harrison. The Junior varsity team will meet Parsonsfield Seminary at North Bridgton on Saturday and the girls will entertain the Fryburg girls in North Bridgton. The hockey team will open the season on Saturday afternoon when Dixfield high school will come to North Bridgton.

Long Lake is in excellent condition for skating and Coach Lovell is taking advantage of this fact with his hockey men as the newly constructed rink on the school campus is not as yet in shape although it is being constantly flooded. Another day should see fine ice on the rink and it should be in excellent shape for Saturday, as it will be flooded each week and they have had several time to get into shape and to make a smooth working machine. However, the local boys are anxious to get away to a good start and they are working hard for this opening game.

Coach Ellis does not know much as yet as to his basket ball team, but now he has cut his squad down to eighteen men, which he will carry the rest of the season. Light weight for the Portland Boys' Club has opened the Bridgton schedule and some excellent games have been played with this excellent club of Portland. However, they have the advantage of the Bridgton lads due to the fact that their season opened several weeks ago and they have had much time to get into shape and to make a smooth working machine. However, the local boys are anxious to get away to a good start and they are working hard for this opening game.

Parish Staff Busy—Work of Re-Decorating Church Nearly Completed—Report in Poetry.

The folks who gathered at Waterville for the New Year's eve party had a good evening together. The Rev. Mr. Williston, who from the Williston Congregational church of Portland were there and gave a concert and Mr. Neely, the director, is the whole group in a community sing.

The ministers of the parish are busy these days, calling through the parish with their New Year's greetings. They are finding many sick with colds and flu. They have also found some who don't improve the traveling on foot.

Mrs. Neely visited over fifty homes on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Mr. Palmer took three children to the clinic in Portland on Wednesday.

The Crooked River Outing Club will meet at the home of Ida Ray on Monday evening, Jan. 9.

The re-decoration of the North Waterville church vestry and kitchen is practically finished. Nearly half of the labor was donated by one of the students of the following high school: Eugene Lovejoy, Roland Little, John Lovejoy, Ralph Knight, Stephen Lee, Charles Saunders, George Kimball and Clinton Nason. All who are in the parish thank these men and the church board for the way they have helped to make up with a little paint.

The following public report was prepared for the closing of the special Christmas program at the Atlantic church on Dec. 29th:

When the snow was soft and white
And the roads were smooth and bright
The angels sang their songs of praise
Their Circle supports us in our days
The ministers of the church are busy
They tell the news to their parishioners
For in two weeks these men will be
And all through the beautiful Sunday
The men tell us that the angels are
And most everyone agrees the angels
The fuel was plenty and available
And the pies, the ministers sent us
Many old time friends have been
And talked over old times of that happy
After the snows of last winter
The crowd for a social hour and
We will have a very good time
Closely with singing and the
We were singing
Tonight we have our own
High
My Christmas to them all in
Many thanks to all those who
To make these weeks a grand
The Old World Church the same
Will be waiting next Spring
Help all
So now we are in our
Until next year we will see all
